

22.6.2010 Smoke Watch

People in the Tamar valley awoke to a little river mist but as it cleared early in the morning it was replaced by thick blue smoke from planned burning.

These shots were taken around 11.15am.

Forestry Tasmania would have received the weather forecast that predicted wind direction towards populated areas but they still went ahead and lit low-intensity smoky planned burns.

When you light fires in the middle of winter they create smoke!

Conditions were so bad it looks like the pictures were taken on a camera with a plastic lens.

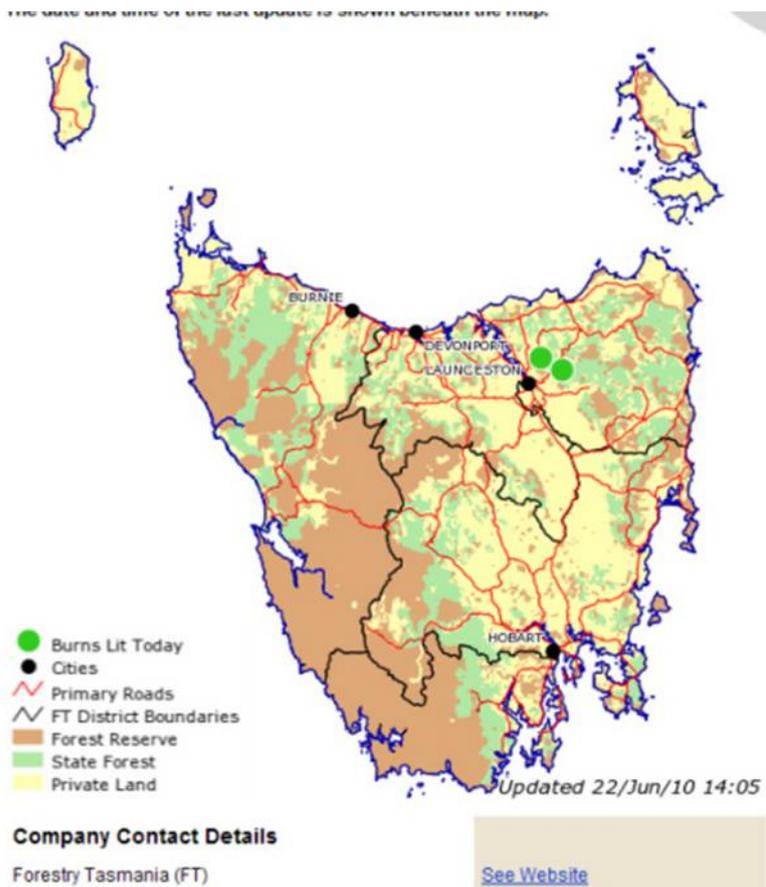

Pyromania comes to mind. Why else would you do such a thing to your fellow man?

Attachments

		Wind	Rain	Humid	Temp
Tuesday
Afternoon	 Sunny. Cool.	9 km/h ENE	-	74%	14
Evening	 Clear. Cool.	11 km/h ENE	-	83%	10
Overnight	 Clear. Cool.	12 km/h NNE	-	82%	9

Today's weather

weather22.6.10a...14.01.jpg (79.86 KiB)

Forestry Tasmania

currentFTburns22.6.10a...14.08.jpg (196.59 KiB)

Selfish burners. Disgusting and unnecessary smoke.
P1010437a.jpg (131.21 KiB)

Taken from Grindelwald looking E.N/E That's where the burns were by the way.
P1010436a.jpg (194.29 KiB)