

Smoke across northern Tas

Sun Oct 12, 2008 10:02 pm

Garry Stannus was in Devonport last night, and on the hills behind the town he says, "he could see a bit of smoke haze and in the sky above the hills. I could see indistinctly that tell-tale layer of smoke. It was still daylight and I thought that it wouldn't show up on a photo too well, being indistinct as it was, from the street I was in in East Devonport".

"Driving back to Launceston. I glanced out in the darkness cum twilight at the mountains and you could see the smoke had developed into its classic 'I'm gonna drift halfway across the island' pattern. I was just past the Latrobe turnoff I think, and pulled off the road to take this one shot".

Well done thank you Garry, because the smoke ended up in the Tamar Valley and beyond.

2008_10110108Latrobe.jpg (18.14 KiB)